Innovative Thinking Inside the Nested Boxes:
The Academic Leaders’ Challenge

March 12-14, 2014
Tempe Mission Palms
Tempe, AZ

Western Alliance of Community College Academic Leaders
About the Alliance

The Western Alliance of Community College Academic Leaders (known as the Alliance) was founded by the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education (WICHE) in 2010. The Alliance’s members are the chief academic officers of the community colleges and technical schools along with their associated system and state agencies located in the 16-member WICHE region (15 states and the U.S. Pacific territories and freely associated states). Through the Alliance, these top academic leaders share perspectives on current issues, work together on regional projects that are beyond the scope of a single institution or state, and contribute resources and expertise to build a stronger future for higher education in the West.

Who should attend

In attendance you will find colleagues from the WICHE region eager to share the lessons they’ve learned from tackling a host of institutional and academic challenges, including the ones you’re facing.

- Provosts, vice presidents and directors of academic affairs at community colleges and technical schools
- Chief executive officers and chief academic officers of related systems and statewide agencies.
- Institutional staff with expertise in the program topic areas, accompanying those above at their invitation.

Message from the Chair

Dear colleagues,

I look forward to welcoming you to Greater Phoenix, Arizona where you can enjoy the beauty of the desert and the richness of our diverse cultures! At a time when we are facing demands to do more for our communities with scarce resources, to increase completion rates dramatically, and to adopt new regulations, we come together to engage in conversations about what matters most to us: our students, their aspirations, and their success. We celebrate the significant work we have accomplished in our community colleges and technical schools, and accept that much still needs to get done as we continue to face old and new challenges. We believe, however, that many of these challenges could be, and should be, addressed through collaborations beyond the scope of a single institution or state. So we have designed our gathering intentionally as a place and time for learning, interaction, exchange of ideas, honest discourse, innovative thinking within the Nested Boxes, and collective action. Together, we can explore solutions and build a stronger future for higher education in the West.

8:45 - 10:00 am  The Future of U.S. Higher Education: A Conversation with Lee Gardner

What’s the near-term future of U.S. higher education? The truth is, no one really knows, not even your speaker. But the current landscape of federal interventions, state policy, technological disruptions, changing demographics, and other complex factors allows for some educated (if sometimes discomfiting) guesses. Join us for an interactive discussion of the issues facing colleges, and of the possible outcomes.

10:00 - 10:15 am  Break
10:15 - 11:30 am  Promising Pathways to Student Success: Using High School Achievement Data to Improve Assessment, Placement, and Attainment of Early Educational Milestones

Using evidence-based, multiple-measures assessment, Long Beach City College (LBCC) substantially increased the rate of first-time students’ assessment into transfer-level courses in English and Math by up to 500%. Once in those courses, these students successfully completed the courses at the same rates as returning students who completed prerequisite courses and as students assessed directly into the courses via standardized tests. Most importantly, when alternative assessments were combined with prescriptive, full-time placement into foundational skills courses, the completion of key early educational milestones increased dramatically across all student demographic groups. LBCC’s findings provide 1) compelling support for the use of high school achievement data as a better predictor of performance in college level courses than traditional, standardized assessments; and 2) strong initial indications that acting on that research can meaningfully improve both the rate of and time to attainment of meaningful educational outcomes.

Choose three topics of interest below. Every 20 minutes a bell will ring and attendees will move to a new topic.

The Maricopa Millions Project: Scaling Up OERs to Save Students Money and Increase Access
The Maricopa Millions Project is designed to scale Open Educational Resource (OER) usage throughout the ten-college district by remixing and adapting current models from across the nation. A steering committee has been established to develop and implement a comprehensive strategic plan to save our students $5 million over 5 years in course materials. The project includes a strategic, sustainable OER infrastructure consisting of building awareness, providing training and support as well as increasing faculty collaboration.

Flipping Student Services: Supporting Students 24/7

Are you prepared to provide services to meet the needs of today’s students? With tight budgets and high demand, institutions are finding it difficult to provide services to all students in a cost-effective manner. This session will explore tools institutions can use to provide 24/7 resources for students; thus, flipping the way we provide support. We will discuss how to enhance orientation programs, academic advising, tutoring, financial aid, supplemental instruction and student success workshops.

Scaling Innovation in TAACCCT Consortia: The Transformative Change Initiative

The unprecedented federal investment in community college workforce education through the TAACCCT grants and the vision of leading consortia of community colleges across the nation have resulted in developing and scaling innovations that might otherwise take many years to accomplish. This session, based on rigorous third-party evaluations and insights from select TAACCCT consortia that are a part of a Transformative Change network, will reveal some of the strategies being implemented and what we’re learning about scaling educational reforms at the regional, state, and national levels.

What If Textbooks Cost $30 or Less? The Open Course Library Project

The Open Course Library was funded by the Washington State Legislature and the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation to hire faculty to develop materials for 81 common courses. Faculty developed a wide variety of solutions that cost students $30 or less per course and that use both publisher and openly licensed material. The project has saved students more than $5 million in textbook costs to date, and all courses are available and openly licensed on http://opencourselibrary.org

Connie Broughton, Washington State Board for Community and Technical Colleges

Unlocking Student Potential: The Power of High School Data

This session will focus on the utility of multiple measures in assessment using existing high school achievement data in the California Community Colleges. The speaker will explain the predictive placement model developed at Long Beach City College that increased placement into college level courses while maintaining success rates, discuss statewide replication of the research by the RP Group, and introduce the development of a new statewide multiple measure resource by a partnership between the Chancellor’s Office and Cal-PASS.

8:00 - 8:30 am  Alliance Membership Update
8:30 - 10:00 am  Competency-Based Education: Best Practices for Institutions and Accreditors

Massive Open Online Courses (MOOCs) and other non-traditional learning opportunities pose new questions about the value of seat time as demonstration of learning and the meaning and viability of the credit hour. Employers want to know what the student knows and can do—not how many credit hours they have accumulated. Some institutions are transitioning to adoption of new models for learning that are more flexible and help students demonstrate proficiency of skills regardless of time and space. With the U.S. Department of Education awarding financial aid status to competency-based institutions, another barrier to competency-based education has been removed. Our panelists will discuss their approaches to competency-based education and highlight some best practices in this area from the constituents they serve.

Mike Cartney, Lake Area Technical Institute

10:00 - 10:15 am  Break
10:15 - 10:45 am  Community Colleges: The Under-Represented Students’ Pathway to the Middle Class

Community colleges are the entry point to higher education for communities that have historically been under-represented in higher education. They play a key role in putting these communities on a path to the middle class. You’ll learn about some of the best practices in this arena along with an update on key activities of the U.S. Department of Education and how they may impact community colleges.

10:45 - 11:45 am  A Look Ahead: More Inside the Boxes?

As we make plans for our institutions’ futures, it is imperative that we incorporate effective use of resources and expertise available from federal agencies. We must know what changes in existing programs are in the offing and what new programs might be added. What are the current hot topics being discussed among the leaders of these agencies? Are there ways that we can help inform these conversations based on our understandings and expertise in the field? Join us for this critical update.

Dress

Dress for the meeting is business casual. The average temperature in the Phoenix area in March is 65 degrees.

Local Attractions

Phoenix is a world-class destination because of its natural beauty, sunny skies, manicured golf courses and sports and cultural attractions. The city’s extensive desert preserve system offers visitors easy access to the Sonoran Desert and its surprising biological diversity. The Phoenix Points of Pride highlight many of the city’s most unique attractions, and city-run facilities such as Pueblo Grande Museum and Heritage and Science Park offer visitors a chance to learn about the Valley’s native heritage and history.

After the program concludes on Friday, we hope you will stay and explore the spectacular Phoenix area. The Phoenix Points of Pride website is http://phoenix.gov/recreation/attract/pride/index.html.

Transportation

Shuttle

The Tempe Mission Palms Hotel offers transportation for individual travelers to and from Sky Harbor International Airport every 1/2 hour from 5:30 am- 10:30 pm daily. Shuttle service is free for Alliance attendees staying in the hotel.

Taxi

Proceed to the Taxi Stand and request Yellow Cab.

Airport Information

The Phoenix Sky Harbor International Airport is served by most major airlines. It is approximately 5 miles from the Tempe Mission Palms.
Desert Botanical Garden - (www.dbg.org), located near the airport, contains approximately fifty acres under cultivation. Something is always blooming at the Desert Botanical Garden.

Outdoors - By foot, by bike, or even by horse, there's no shortage of mountain trails, some right in the city and some in the middle of the Sonoran Desert. Climb iconic Camelback Mountain (20 minutes from downtown), see the cityscape from Piestawa Peak, or head to South Mountain (just outside the city) for over 50 miles of trails.

Phoenix Zoo - (www.phoenixzoo.org) Voted one of the nation’s top five zoos for kids.

Wildlife World Zoo and Aquarium- (www.wildlifeworld.com) recently expanded to include an aquarium with 80 indoor exhibits.

Arizona Science Center - (www.azscience.org) more than 300 interactive exhibits, a planetarium and IMAX theatre.

Heard Museum - (www.heard.org) this internationally known repository houses art and artifacts providing insights into the state’s 22 American Indian tribes and promotes the work of contemporary American Indian artists and artisans.

Phoenix Art Museum - (www.phxart.org) an impressive collection of European, Asian, Latin American, Western American and contemporary pieces—about 18,000 works in all.

Shopping Areas - Biltmore Fashion Park, Scottsdale Fashion Square, Old Town Scottsdale and Mill Avenue, just to name a few.

Golf and Spa - too many to mention for a full list of resorts and spas: http://www.visitphoenix.com/index.aspx

Grand Canyon/South Rim - 3 ½ to 5 hours by car (depending on how many scenic stops you make along the way).

Sedona - Approximately 120 miles north; approximately 2 hours.

Biographical Information on the Speakers

Connie Broughton, director of eLearning and open resources, joined the Washington State Board for Community and Technical Colleges (SBCTC) in August of 2001. SBCTC eLearning provides a suite of elearning tools and support for the 34 community and technical colleges in the state of Washington. Broughton has been developing and managing collaborative elearning projects since 1997. These projects include WashingtonOnline, The Western eTutoring Consortium, and the Open Course Library. She has also taught at Spokane Falls Community College, Spokane Community College, Eastern Washington University and Washington State University.

Sandra Elman has been the president of the Northwest Commission on Colleges and Universities since 1996. She is responsible for overseeing the quality assurance regional accreditation process for 165 plus member and candidate institutions in Alaska, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Utah and Washington and British Columbia, Canada. Elman has held faculty and administrative positions at the University of Massachusetts Boston; University of Maryland and the University of California, Berkeley. Elman received her B.A. degree from Hunter College in New York and her M.A. and Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley. She has published extensively in the fields of higher education and public policy and lectures nationally and internationally on governance; quality assurance and international peace.

Scott Evenbeck joined the City University of New York in 2011 as Guttman Community College’s founding president. He served as professor of psychology and founding dean of University College at Indiana University-Purdue University, Indianapolis. He joined the psychology faculty there after completing his master’s and doctorate in social psychology at University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He earned his bachelor’s degree in psychology at Indiana University at Bloomington. Evenbeck has long been involved in designing, implementing, and assessing programs for students in their first years of university study. He played a major role in various initiatives to support student achievement in Indiana, including efforts to keep students in college. He was a task force advisor for the Foundations of Excellence in the First College Year and a board member of the American Conference of Academic deans.

Lee Gardner, a senior editor at the The Chronicle, oversees the Finance & Policy section, which includes coverage of state and federal governments, accreditation, for-profit education, fund raising, college facilities and sustainability practices, and other aspects of the business of higher education. Before joining The Chronicle, in May 2012, he spent nine years as editor in chief of Baltimore City Paper. Under his stewardship, the newspaper won numerous awards from the Association of Alternative Newsmedia. In addition to prior stints as arts editor and music editor at the City Paper, he also worked as a staff writer at the alternative weekly Metro Pulse and an assistant editor at Whittle Communications. His writing has appeared in a variety of other publications as well, including Nylon, Cooking Light, The Wire, and alt-weeklies. Gardner earned a bachelor’s degree in English literature from Towson University.

Paul Golisch has served in IT leadership positions for more than 20 years, with the last seven as the dean of information technology at Paradise Valley Community College. He has presented at local, regional, and national educational conferences and has had leadership roles on several districtwide committees. Prior to joining the Maricopa Community College District, Golisch was a math teacher and director of educational technology in the largest high school district in Illinois. He received his BS in mathematics from Valparaso University and an MEd in instructional technology from National-Louis University in Evanston, IL.

Christopher Johnson has over 18 years of higher education experience in state, private, and for-profit institutions, serving as a department chair, academic dean, curriculum developer, and faculty member. Johnson has developed undergraduate and graduate curriculum and taught courses at the two-year and four-year levels in traditional, online, and blended/hybrid formats. In addition to his instructional roles, Johnson is currently an American Council on Education faculty reviewer, a national coordinator leading review teams for the corporate and military programs, and a regional liaison in the College and University Partnerships Department. Johnson received his BS in history and political science from Western Carolina University and has a master’s in education from Temple University. His doctoral degree, earned at Capella University, is in education with a concentration in higher education leadership.

Rebecca Klein-Collins is the senior director of research and policy development for the Council for Adult and Experiential Learning (CAEL), overseeing research in topics related to higher education innovations, prior learning assessment, competency-based education, non-traditional learners, and workforce development. She assists in developing new approaches for state and federal policy change, she speaks regularly to national audiences on various topics related to adult learners, and she authors numerous articles and policy papers for CAEL. Klein-Collins has a bachelor’s degree from Grinnell College and master’s degrees from Indiana University and the University of Chicago Harris School of Public Policy.

Catherine Kirby is a research information specialist at the Office of Community College Research and Leadership at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, where she provides leadership in evaluation, research and development projects related to the Department of Labor’s Trade Adjustment Assistance Community College and Career Training grants and Pathways to Results. Kirby formerly served as the project manager for Illinois’s Shifting Gears initiative. Her work history includes teaching at Parkland College in health science and in a bachelor’s degree completion program in the School of Technology at Eastern Illinois University. She is an experienced trainer and educational consultant in organization development, career development, and career pathways. She holds an EdM degree and has completed advanced coursework from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign with an emphasis in higher education and community college leadership.

Valerie Kiesel is currently a co-owner of Innovative Educators and focuses on curriculum design, product development, and strategic partnerships. She has over 15 years experience as a teacher, advisor, recruiter and web administrator at the high school and community college levels. Prior to this, she worked in online learning, advising, and online student services at Front Range Community College. She holds a bachelor’s degree in English from Colorado College and a master’s degree in information and learning technologies from the University of Colorado, Denver.

James Lanich brings decades of education experience to his position as executive director of Cal-PASS Plus, the California Partnership for Achieving Student Success. A former middle school science teacher, Lanich joined the Los Angeles County Office of Education to lead the largest research and development unit of any educational agency in the nation and assumed leadership of core curriculum services for the Los Angeles County superintendent of schools. He served as director for the Inaugural Broad Prize for Urban Education and was appointed by U.S. Secretary of Education Margaret Spellings to the National Assessment Governing Board. Lanich cofounded Educational Results Partnership, the largest longitudinally linked student achievement database in the country. He received his PhD in curriculum and instruction from USC.

David Longanecker has served as president of the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education in Boulder since 1999. Previously, Longanecker served for six years as the assistant secretary for postsecondary education at the U.S. Department of Education. Prior to that he was the state higher education executive officer in Colorado and Minnesota. He was also the principal analyst for higher education for the Congressional Budget Office. Longanecker has served on numerous boards and commissions. He has written extensively on a range of higher education issues. His primary interests in higher education are: expanding access to successful completion for students within all sectors of higher education, promoting student and institutional performance, assuring efficient and effective finance and financial aid strategies, and fostering effective use of educational technologies, all for the purpose of sustaining the nation’s strength in the world and increasing the quality of life for all Americans, particularly those who have traditionally been left out in the past. He holds an Ed.D. from Stanford University, an M.A. in student personnel work from George Washington University, and a B.A. in sociology from Washington State University.

Michael McFarlane is vice president for academic affairs at Great Basin College, a position held since 2004. GBC is a comprehensive community college offering select baccalaureate degrees to complement a mission to deliver higher education to rural Nevada. McFarlane has been highly engaged in the development of this mission. Before entering college administration, he taught for 22 years in geology and other physical sciences, and worked previously in the mining industry as a geologist. McFarlane received his B.A. from Humboldt State University (California), and M.S. and Ph.D. from the University of Nevada, Reno, all in geology.

Mark Mitsui is the deputy assistant secretary for community colleges in the U.S. Department of Education Office of Vocational and Adult Education (OVAE). Previously, he served as the president of North Seattle Community College (NSCC). At NSCC he increased international student enrollment by over 50% and hosted several international delegations researching the American community college system, as well as taking part in the statewide task force to review and redesign the performance funding system in Washington's Community and Technical Colleges, including the student success metrics. Prior to his term at NSCC, Mitsui served as vice president of student services for South Seattle Community College; assistant dean at Green River Community College; director or student success and retention services at NSCC; and as a tenured faculty at Renton Technical College.

Eloy Ortiz Oakley serves as the superintendent-president of the Long Beach Community College (LBCC) District. Since his appointment he has led the implementation of innovative programs and policies that help students succeed in college, including the Long Beach College Promise and Promise Pathways – both of which have gained national attention. Prior to his appointment, he served as vice president of administrative services at LBCC and as vice president of college services at Oxnard College. He received his bachelor of arts in environmental analysis and design and master of business administration from UC Irvine, after studying at Golden West College.

Terry O’Banion served as president of the League for Innovation in the Community College for 23 years and currently serves as chair of the graduate faculty at National American University. He has authored 15 books and over 200 articles, chapters, and monographs on the community college and has consulted in over 800 community colleges. O’Banion received his BA in English and master’s in counseling psychology from the University of Florida and his PhD in higher education administration from Florida State University.

Peter Quigley is the University of Hawai‘i System community colleges’ associate vice president for academic affairs. He is responsible for academic program planning, evaluation and assessment; course and program articulation; regional accreditation; federal higher education and workforce development issues, and collaboration with external agencies. He also has served as interim vice chancellor for academic affairs at the University of Hawai‘i at Manoa and chancellor at Leeward Community College. Prior to coming to Hawai‘i, Quigley served as dean of the College of Arts and Humanities at Minnesota State University and as dean of academics/chief academic officer at Emory Riddle University.
